

Chris Darling, RIBA
Managing Director

Chris set up Darling Associates Architecture in 2003, drawing on his wide-ranging experience and quickly established the company as a leading design-led practice. He offers vision and leadership in all our projects, ensuring the highest of standards in both design output and client satisfaction.

After studying Architecture at the University of Edinburgh, he was awarded a Carnegie Scholarship for design and graduated with honours. Chris joined Frederick Gibberd where he was appointed Principal Associate. His main achievement was a 30,000 sqm retail centre involving extensive urban improvements.

After ten years at Gibberd he joined Terry Farrell and Partners where he was responsible for the practice's Crossrail team before joining Hamilton Associates in 1994. At Hamilton's he worked on a mixture of workplace and major residential projects, and was appointed an Equity Director in 1997. He was responsible for the 40 Berkeley Square, Cambridge Business Park offices schemes together with major residential projects in London at Richmond Bridge, Artillery Mansions and Trevor Square.

Chris' interest lies with developing an architectural language around the principles of proportion, harmony and the careful selection and detailing of materials. Whilst his expertise lies in the areas of residential, hotel and offices design, he pushes the practice forward into new and constantly evolving territory, always striving to ensure the approach remains fresh and the highest standards are achieved.

In recent years, Chris has transformed Darling Associates into a top 25 UK architectural practice, including the acquisition of a Manchester business and the establishment of a successful subsidiary in Studio Luna. Chris is currently working on strategies to secure the long term future ownership of the practice via an Employee Share Ownership Trust.

Outside the office, he is an enthusiastic yachtsman and a keen member of Itchenor Sailing Club.
